Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

In 1978, a Canadian team of climbers was granted permission for an autumn 1982 expedition to climb Mt. Everest via the Nepal side of the mountain. The objective was to put a Canadian team on the summit for the first time, via a new route on the mountain's South Spur. In 1981, the Montreal-based company CanEverEx was formed to facilitate the marketing, promotional, and licensing aspects of the expedition. Montreal-based Programmed Communications Limited was subsequently contracted by CanEverEx and the Canadian Mount Everest Society to further act as an administrator and curator of the photographs and other media produced during the expedition. Air Canada joined as a primary sponsor for the expedition, and extensive press coverage and promotional opportunities were planned. In 1979 The Calgary Herald and Southam News bought the newspaper rights for the expedition coverage and the television rights were acquired by the CBC and ABC. Teleglobe Canada was engaged to provide a satellite configuration that would provide the first-ever live video links between Everest and Canada, and further video and photographic documentation was enabled through sponsorships from Hitachi, Leica and Kodak.

A specially-chartered Air Canada cargo plane delivered expedition supplies to Nepal via India in April 1982, accompanied by a small advance party of climbers and photographers. The full team departed for Nepal in July 1982, under the leadership of expedition leader Bill March. Several months in to the expedition, on August 31, an avalanche hit in the Khumbu Icefall, killing 3 of the expedition's Sherpa team members, including Ang Chuldim Sherpa (age 18), Pasang Sona Sherpa (age 40), and Dawa Dorje Sherpa (age 40). A second Icefall accident occurred on September 2, killing expedition cameraman Blair Griffiths (age 33). Following this, 6 climbers left the expedition, including Tim Auger, Rusty Baillie, James Blench, Jim Elzinga, Dave McNab, and Don Serl. Team doctor David Jones also left due to health reasons. The planned South Spur route was changed to the South Col route, and on October 5, 1982, Laurie Skreslet became the first Canadian to summit Mount Everest with Sherpa team members Sungdare Sherpa and Lhakpa Dorje. Two days later, on October 7, team member Pat Morrow reached the summit with Lhakpa Tshering and Pema Dorje. Upon their return to Calgary, Programmed Communications Limited greeted the team and members of the press with a welcome home slideshow presentation, using photographs that the team members had taken along the way. The team was subsequently honoured in Ottawa by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Custodial history

Jim Muir's Montreal-based company Programmed Communications Limited (PCL) held the contract to manage the 1982 Canadian Everest Expedition's photograph and slide files, and to create presentations and other promotional events related to the expedition. Because of PCL's integral involvement in developing the media campaign around the Everest project, Muir amassed a substantial collection of expedition-related records. In the mid-1990s, he transferred his collected Everest records to the Centre for Mountain Culture at the Banff Centre. He established a verbal agreement with Bernadette McDonald, founder and director of Mountain Culture at the time, and the records were retained by Mountain Culture. On July 20, 1998, the records were transferred to Centre's Archives for temporary storage. During this time Mountain Culture periodically licensed some of the collection's video footage, and created digitized copies of this footage. In 2018, the materials were were formally accessioned by the Archives.

Scope and content

The collection consists of a broad range of records and media generated throughout all stages of the 1982 Canadian Everest Expedition, from the advance promotional and logistical preparations in Canada and Nepal through to the realization of the expedition in Nepal, and post-trip presentations within Canada. These materials were primarily assembled by Jim Muir, whose Montreal-based company Programmed Communications Limited was in charge of organizing and maintaining the expedition's photographs and slides, as well as developing presentations and other promotional activities.
The collection is divided into 6 series and one sous-fonds, with the arrangement reflecting the diversity of the types of materials accumulated, as well as the organization of Muir's own administrative files.
The collection includes Muir's correspondence and administrative papers from the expedition, press clippings and selected publications related to the expedition, photographs and slides taken by expedition team members and other press affiliates in Canada, Nepal, and on other training climbs around the world, film and video (both raw footage shot in Nepal by expedition members, as well as news programs and promotional presentations), and a vast selection of audio material (both field recordings and Base Camp transmissions, as well as more-formally produced presentations and radio programs). The sous-fonds contains oral history interviews that archives practicum Abigail Sebaly has conducted with expedition team members and affiliates in 2018.

Series descriptions

Series EV-EV1: Jim Muir 1982 Canadian Mount Everest Expedition administrative files

Date: 1978-2008, predominant 1982-1983 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

Series contains Jim Muir's administrative files related to the 1982 Everest expedition, and correspondence from the Banff Centre's Mountain Culture division regarding the transfer of Muir's files. Muir oversaw the organization and management of all photographs and slides that were produced in relation to the expedition, and was tasked with planning slideshow events and other presentations prior to and following the expedition. The series includes copies of agreements regarding photograph and film rights, scripts for presentations, plans for lecture tours, expedition sponsor and supplier information, correspondence with expedition team members and other affiliates, expedition press clippings, and a selection of team headshots and expedition photographs.

Physical description: 18 cm of textual records
61 photographs: b&w and col. ; 8 x 10 or smaller
1 audio cassette
1 sound recording (.wav)

Immediate source of acquisition:

The materials in File 11 from this Series came through a records transfer from the Banff Centre's Mountain Culture department, via RT-440. They were combined with the collection because they include a cassette tape with Muir narrating the contents of the collection, and correspondence that the department had with the estate of John Muir.

Arrangement:

With the exception of File 11, files in the series have been organized as they were originally received from Muir. File naming conventions have also been adopted from the subject headings that Muir originally used. Note that some files are labeled "CMEE." This denotes "Canadian Mount Everest Expedition".

Series EV-EV3: 1982 Canadian Everest Expedition photographs

Date: 1982 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

The series contains negatives and contact sheets related to pre-expedition activities, including an expedition sponsor showcase in Toronto and studio team head shots taken in Canada. Also includes expedition photos taken by team members in Thailand, Kathmandu, and various locations on the Mt. Everest climbing route, as well as an audio cassette of photo notes that Brian Smith of Programmed Communications Limited (PCL) in Montreal sent to the individual climbers, mid-expedition. The series also contains a subseries of photographic notes, inscribed on scraps of paper, that the climbers sent with each of their individual rolls of film from Nepal back to PCL.

Date: 1982 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

Sub-series contains photo notes that expedition members wrote on scraps of paper and sent along with their rolls of film from Nepal to Canada. Programmed Communications Limited (PCL) staff organized the notes into packets according to shipment number and paper summaries were written up by Lynn Huntley at PCL. These notes were later incorporated into the slide guides. The files in this sub-series are organized according to original shipment packets, and some of which contained two shipments in one group.

Physical description: 8 cm of textual records

Arrangement:

These notes ultimately formed the foundation for the slide file guide that PCL later created. However, since they were originally linked to the photographs that the expedition team members took, the archivist has chosen to keep them within this series.

Series EV-EV4: 1982 Canadian Everest Expedition slides and slide documentation

Date: 1981-1982 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

Series consists of one sub-series of slides documenting activities throughout all stages of the Canadian team's Everest expedition preparation and realization, from pre-training climbs and expedition promotion to travel in Nepal and maneuvers on Everest itself. Slides were taken by expedition team members as well as press photographers. Series also includes paper file guides prepared by Programmed Communications Limited (PCL), and a series of internegatives, duplicated by PCL from a selection of the original negatives.

Subseries EV-EV4-EV4.SS1: Slides

Date: 1981-1982 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

Sub-series consists of slides from pre-Everest training climbs in Asia, North America, and South America, and other pre-expedition promotional and supplier-related activities. The sub-series also includes shots taken by team members throughout the 1982 expedition itself, from the extensive trek in to Everest Base Camp, to various points along the climbing route. The sub-series also includes 2 paper versions of a slide file guide that were created by Programmed Communications Limited (PCL) in Montreal as they processed the expedition team's incoming rolls of film that traveled from Nepal to Canada. The files within the sub-series are organized around the various slideshow presentations and promotional events that PCL prepared in its capacity as manager of the Everest photographic and slide files.
